Templates & Examples

Kluwer Arbitration Templates & Examples is an online collection of practical advice, reusable templates, and insightful examples to guide counsel, parties, and arbitrators in each phase of a case. The templates can be edited to suit the circumstances of the case at hand and examples provide illustration from other cases.

All sample documents have been anonymized and tested according to the most current arbitration rules of a particular institution. Where possible, each document has been edited to refer only to the relevant institutional rules, and to the laws of up to three fictitious countries that have been created for this project: Olivaria (Capital City: Salem; Currency: $O), Elliottopia (Capital City: Charlianna; Currency: $E), and Neutralistan (Capital City: Portimore, Currency: $N).

Guidance

The Request for Arbitration is the first submission that the Claimant makes in an arbitration. It is the document that sets the entire process into motion. While the ICC does not require any particular form for the Request for Arbitration, it offers instruction for submission through its online case platform, ICC Case Connect.⁽¹⁾

The Claimant has the freedom to file any style of Request for Arbitration it chooses. The Claimant has full authority to determine the length, level of detail, and style of organization of its Request for Arbitration.⁽²⁾ The Effective Management of Arbitration: A Guide for In-House Counsel and Other Party Representatives (ICC Effective Management Guide) suggests that the Claimant's choice will depend on circumstances of the case and strategic considerations.⁽³⁾ A shorter Request for Arbitration may provide only 'temporary saving if the Claimant is ultimately required to supplement such a Request with additional detailed information'.⁽⁴⁾ A longer Request for Arbitration should provide the Arbitral Tribunal with a 'full statement of the case', thereby saving the Parties
